

Born and grew up in Bangkok, Patcharin Prateepatana earned her medical degree from Faculty of Medicine Siriraj Hospital, Mahidol University. After working for a few years as a general practitioner, she spent three years in residency training at the Department of Pediatrics of the same medical school and earned her Diplomate of the Thai Board of Pediatrics. She spent another two years in fellowship training in Pediatric Neurology at the Neurology division, Department of Pediatrics, the same medical school and earned a Diplomate of the Thai Subspecialty Board of Pediatric Neurology. She worked at a child psychiatric hospital as a general practitioner, a pediatrician and a pediatric neurologist. In addition to the medical training, she attended courses in epidemiology and statistics. She is familiar with medical research, including conducting studies and presenting the studies at both local and international seminars. She is fluent in both Thai and English languages. She has translated many English articles to Thai that were published in the hospital gazette. Currently she resides in the United States of America.